

Compressing thought into Haikus

Many of these verses, particularly those written in 2016-2017, are included in the book Still Digging – scratching the surface and plumbing the depths of prayer.

A well honed poem

A well honed poem
Inspires imagination
It reverberates.

How Haikus Work

(The simple Haiku format of 3 lines consisting of 5, 7 then 5 syllables forces the writer to compress ideas, which presses the thoughts deeper...)

Five – seven – five – STOP
That is where a haiku ends...
But the thought lingers

Still Digging

(The first haiku I ever wrote tells a story about my journey that continues to echo in experience...)

I tried to dig down
To the bottom of God's love...
I am still digging.

Life's hope

In the dawn childhood
Shines bright and green and hopeful.
When dusk closes in Embers can glow forever

Message written in blood

(The Christian story is not an easy read...)

Love is the message
Written in blood on the cross.
It hurts to read it.

Walking on Water

(What did Peter feel like as he walked towards Jesus? And what does faith feel like in today's sceptical world?)

Walking on water
The sea looks far more choppy.
Help me or I'll sink

Holding Faith Lightly

Faith must face scepticism. It's not healthy to ignore it. (This three verse haiku breaks the rules. But being conventional does not promote growth)

Orthodox doctrine
But nothing above question;
Faith strengthened by doubt.

Better to believe
In gold that's been through the fire
Than to trust in straw.

Holding faith lightly,
Knowing it must be tested ...
It always survives.

Samuel listened

(1 Samuel 3:1-10)

Samuel awoke,
Hearing the same voice again.
This time he listened

Prayer starts here

Prayer takes all forms.
But it doesn't even start
Until we turn up.

©Derrick Phillips 2016

Holy Habits

Holy habits help
To keep us on the pure path
Of discipleship.

Kneeling

Kneeling, I submit
It's not a place for boasting;
A place for prayer

©Derrick Phillips 2016

Not about duty

Not about duty
Not about ticking boxes
It's all about God.

©Derrick Phillips 2016

The next poem isn't in strict haiku format, but, because it's short, it's included here:

Suffering

I don't blame God for my suffering, but –
I let him use it.

©Derrick Phillips 2017

Adoration

Adoration is
A right sense of proportion –
I bow to the truth.

©Derrick Phillips 2017

Another 2-verse haiku:

Thanksgiving

If I am thankful
my spirit is uplifted,
so I benefit.

Thankfulness is good,
not just for the one we thank,
but to make us smile.

©Derrick Phillips 2017

Take off your shoes

Take off your shoes
And feel the rough, dirty earth -
That is holy ground

©Derrick Phillips 2017

Be still

To be really still means letting go of tension,
muscle by muscle

©Derrick Phillips 2017

My song is a prayer

When I worship God
I ride on clouds of wonder.
My song is a prayer.

©Derrick Phillips 2017

A promise to pray

A promise to pray
is a commitment to love.
I must not forget.

©Derrick Phillips 2017

This one's also not strictly a Haiku, but it's short:

Guilt be gone

Guilt be gone
I am who I am
I'll meet with my God
Any way that I can.

©Derrick Phillips 2017

Two more verses that are not strictly in haiku format, but they are short, and consistent in theme with others in this document:

Thoughts that won't go away

I just had this thought
as I started to pray;
it popped into my mind
and it won't go away

©Derrick Phillips 2017

In distraction or temptation

In distraction or temptation
we're not obliged to fall – though the phone may keep on ringing we don't have to take the call.

©Derrick Phillips 2017

The following 2 haikus present ways of dealing with distraction in prayer and are based on advice given in "The Cloud of Unknowing":

When distractions come

When distractions come
I look straight over their heads
as if they're not there

©Derrick Phillips 2017

When it's all too much

When it's all too much
I fall down like a coward
and leave it to God.

©Derrick Phillips 2017

Again, not a true haiku, but short:

People who can teach me

The people who can teach me whoever they may be have views that may be faulty – they could be as wrong as me!

©Derrick Phillips 2017

Stages of prayer

I want to progress
through the stages of prayer
whatever it costs.

©Derrick Phillips 2017

One word is enough

One word is enough
to fix my prayer on God
and focus on him.

©Derrick Phillips 2017

Prayer ministry

I am no better than the people I pray for.
But still I can pray

©Derrick Phillips 2017

Dandelion

The dandelion –
Scorned as an invasive weed,
But golden - and bright.
